

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

A Protest.

EDITORS OF 'THE AUK':—

Dear Sirs:—Let me add my protest against the present collection-rage, especially the egg form. The persons given over to this mischievous passion see their own side of the matter and often, no doubt, feel innocent. There is, of course, something to study, however little, comparatively, even in a boughten egg shell. I emphasize the boughten because, the wholesale robbing of rookeries being barter, specimens gotten in this way lack even the power which an egg of one's own collecting has to call back the vision of the nest and its environment.

Any breeding colony, like that of the Brown Pelicans at Pelican Island is especially tempting to these individuals, and especially at their mercy. And while truer students are delighting in their occasional visits to such a place, and living on the memory; and whereas such a colony within reach is a priceless treasure for the world of students of the Life History of Birds, any one of these less intelligent persons may at one swoop, like a monkey in a flower garden, very nearly sweep the whole colony from the face of the earth; and at the best, for so proportionately poor a reason that his act stands black against all the beautiful good he has marred.

There should be no confounding of the horde of ignorant persons in whom the getting-passion is their only claim to the name of naturalist, with the student who must have a large series; and advice to amateurs to get all the specimens they can will prove pernicious in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred.

I think it very necessary to publish widely in all bird-magazines such names as that of L. W. Brownell of Nyack who has given us in 'The Osprey' his own account of his looting of Pelican Island, and bringing away one hundred and twenty-five sets of eggs,—about a quarter of the entire number.

Yours very truly,

ABBOTT H. THAYER.

Scarborough, N. Y.

Mar. 23, 1899.